From Bulbpedia, the community-powered Pokémon Encyclopedia. Dialga (Japanese:  Dial イ It is not known to develop in or from any other Pokémon. The Game of The Dialaga Pokémon Diamond is the mascot, which is visible on BoxArt. With Palkia and Girtina, it is a member of the creation trio of Sinoh representing time. Biology Dialga is a dark blue, sauropod-like Pokémon with some grey metal parts, such as its chest plate, which is a diamond in the center. It also has various light blue stripes. On its back is a fin-like structure and a crest on its head, which resembles a dinosaur. There are also two horns above Dialaga's head, two feng-like horns around his mouth and three spinning behind his neck. It looks at three paws on each leg of the same metal as your chest plate. There are faint cracks in its body. The wing-like structure on its back can be used to focus on the flow of time, as seen in time, darkness, and explorers of the sky. Dialga can either intensify it, slow it down, or warp the time by stopping it completely. It can also travel through time to travel past, present and future. It is said that when Dialaga was born, the time began to move and will continue to flow until The Dilaga's heart is still throbbing. As The Dilaga mainly lives in a different dimension, it is almost impossible to study its behavior. It has been shown to be very protective of your home. It also tends to clash violently with its counterpart Palkia. Dialaga is referred to as a god in the Sinoh myths. It is the only known Pokémon that can learn the roar of time. In anime in anime, anime major appearances in Primal Dilaga (film) Dilaga made his physical debut in The Rise of Darkara, where it fought with Paltia and Darkara in a battle that almost destroyed Alamos town. It then briefly reappearitised in Girtiona and Sky Warrior. During his journey back to his own dimension, Dialga ended up in the reverse world and was attacked by Giratina, who was angered by the Dialga and Palkia battles in the previous film. In Arses and Jewel of Life, Dialaga was shown for the first time with both other members of his trio. After being called by Sheena to prevent a spatial deformation, it briefly fought with Girtina once again. Later, it returned to help Palkia and Giratina battle Arceus. After being injured, it sent Sheena, Ash and her friends back in time to mend The Arses' betrayal. Pokémon mystery will dial the primal in dungeon: Explorers were defenders of primal dialga time gears, beyond sky-time and darkness. Others in Legend's War finale!. Dialaga and Palkia were called on the javelin column by Cyrus. They were put under their control through the use of the red chain and were tasked by him to open a portal to another dimension, wanting a world of their own. After the destruction of the red chain and Cyrus' exit, Dialaga and Palkia went unchecked, for Sinnoh were born. Both were calmed down and sent away with the help of lake parents. In the struggle of the Hoopa and eras, Dialga was one of six legendary Pokémon called and hypnotized by shadow hoopa unbound as its reinforcement. It and its teammates engaged in a battle against Latios, Latias, and the dazzling Rayquaza called for the defense of the real Hupa in Dahra City. Pokémon Mystery Dungeon: Explorers of Time, Darkness and Sky: Dialaga appears in the main story, but mostly as primal dialaga. In the future, due to the collapse of the proverbial tower, Dialga has lost control of itself and entered a state of self-preservation, keeping time frozen and refusing to flow it properly. When players and companions return from the future and arrive at the shattered tower, they must beat the almost-primal dialga in battle and restore the tower. Having put some sense into it, Dialga is so grateful that it revives the player (who was erased from existence). After heading back to Dialaga at the top of the temporal tower, it decides that the player wants a rematch. Once lost, Dialaga joins the player's team. The special episode in the future of Darkness itself in the sky, after the final battle between the seminal Dialga and The Trio of Grovyle, Dusknoir and Celebi, all of them seem to disappear due to the fact finally being replaced by the player, but being saved by a vested high being from Dialga, who also restored Dialga to its normal position. With Palkia, the Shinto of Izanami and Iznaqi can be based on legend, who is said to have built an island with a spear, built a pillar on it, and from there built the islands of Japan. In terms of appearance, the dialga appears to be based on low-necked sauropod dinosaurs such as kemersaurus or brachytrachelopan. Its type is probably steel due to the hardness of the diamond, the fact that the metal has been known for long periods of time, or the fact that most parts of a watch are made of metal, such as gears. This can also happen because diamonds are carbon-compressed, and steel is an ally from iron and carbon. Symbolically, this could be a reference to the rigid and irreversible pattern of passing times, as metals are known for their resilience against physical forces. Its turquoise pattern on its body is a vague reminder of the hands of the clock, where the ends of the clock's hands are diamond-shaped. The name is derived from the original Dialga diamond.
